Statement from Chuck Mathewson on IGT

Las Vegas, NV--- Chuck Mathewson, former CEO and Chairman of IGT responded to claims against him by the current leadership of IGT today.

"I am disappointed in the misleading and untruthful personal attacks that IGT leveled against me today it is a weak attempt to divert attention away from poor management decisions.

In our conversations with shareholders it has become clear that there is strong dissatisfaction with the company's performance over the past 3-plus years, as reflected in an approximate 20% decline in share price since early October 2009.

Shareholders realized the value of the 17 years I spent as CEO and/or Chairman of IGT, when they benefitted from the almost 26,000% increase in split-adjusted share price during this period and I am confident that shareholders understand the facts and will support our efforts to refocus IGT on the casino gaming business.

I look forward to engaging in conversations with ALL shareholders to make explicitly clear that the company has made indefensible statements in its letter and that they have done so because the reality is that they have not performed well as a company and are now being challenged to do better,” Mathewson said.
