BOC to expand production capacity in Wisconsin

Edgar Filing: BOC GROUP PLC - Form 6-K

Gases to serve hospitals, food processors, metals and chemicals manufacturers

Windlesham 9 May 2006 - BOC, one of the world's largest industrial gases companies, will build a new air separation unit in south central Wisconsin to strengthen service to Midwestern customers.

BOC is investing for growth where the market conditions are right. This is the second new air separation plant BOC will begin building this year in the US, coming hard on the heels of an announcement last month to build a plant in Georgia. Since 2004, BOC has announced plans to invest more than $250 million in the US, including three new hydrogen plants.

The plant's exact location is subject to successful negotiations with the state of Wisconsin and other local approval agencies. The plant will produce over 700 tons a day of liquid oxygen and nitrogen. The gases will be trucked to hospitals, food processors, metals and chemicals manufacturers in Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa.

Construction is expected to begin during the summer of 2006, with production starting at the end of 2007.

"BOC has seen demand in the Midwest increase steadily over the last few years, driven mostly by food processing, combustion and petrochemical applications. We've seen excellent growth in Wisconsin and the greater Chicago area and we are making this investment in order to improve service to our customers," said Trevor Burt, president of PGS North America, the BOC business making this investment.

"One location BOC is considering is in the greater Beloit area, which is located near many of our major customers in Wisconsin and the Chicago area, has the zoning and power infrastructure we need and gives us access to many of the region's major highways," Burt said.

BOC will employ between 35 to 40 people at the plant, most of whom will be truck drivers.

The Wisconsin plant, BOC's first in the state, is the second part of an effort to streamline the company's Midwest operations. It replaces an older Illinois plant that was shut several years ago. This new plant is significantly more energy efficient and has 40 percent greater capacity.

Besides increasing production capacity, the new location enables BOC to optimize its distribution patterns. Drivers will have to cover less distance to serve customers in Wisconsin and Chicago and BOC's existing plants in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio will be able to free up production to support customers located closer to them.

"This plant will strengthen our supply capability throughout the entire Midwest and will enable BOC to help customers meet their businesses' changing and growing demands," Burt said.

The BOC Group is one of the largest and most global of the world's leading gases companies. Serving two million customers in more than 50 countries, BOC employs 30,000 people and had total annual revenues of (pound)4.6 billion in 2005. Further information about The BOC Group may be obtained on the Internet at <http://www.boc.com>.

BOC will join Tongji University and Shell Hydrogen to build the first hydrogen refuelling station in Shanghai

Windlesham 11 May 2006 -- The BOC Group plc and Tongji University have signed a Letter of Intent to build the first hydrogen refuelling station in Shanghai. This project is part of the Ministry of Science and Technology's national programme to commercialise fuel cell vehicles in China. The station is due to be completed by the end of 2006 and will refuel three buses and 20 cars.

The project team led by Tongji University will be responsible overall for the project. BOC will provide engineering and procurement services needed to deliver the packaged hydrogen compression, storage, dispensing system and trucked in compressed gas hydrogen for the new station. Shell, which is funding part of the project, is working with Tongji University on the design, construction, maintenance and operations of the refuelling station.

BOC has previously participated in trials with hydrogen-fuelled buses in London, Detroit, Vancouver and Perth, Australia.
