Roche disappointed by Illumina, Inc.'s Board of Directors' rejection
By not engaging with Roche, Illumina reinforces notion of an entrenched Board

Roche (SIX: RO, ROG; OTCQX: RHHBY) released the following statement in response to the announcement by Illumina, Inc. (NASDAQ: ILMN) that its Board of Directors has recommended that shareholders not tender their shares to Roche's increased offer.

"We are disappointed that Illumina's Board of Directors has rejected Roche's increased $51.00 cash offer and continues to rebuff our attempts to engage in substantive discussions," said Severin Schwan, CEO of Roche Group. Schwan continued, "Roche's increased offer is highly attractive. By not engaging with Roche, Illumina reinforces the notion that its Board and management are determined to preserve their positions rather than maximize shareholder value. We expect that Illumina shareholders will see the substantial value in our increased offer, conclude that there is absolutely no justification for Illumina's current directors' refusal to begin discussions with Roche and vote their shares for the Roche director nominees."

About the Offer

On January 27, 2012, Roche commenced a tender offer to acquire all outstanding shares of Illumina for $44.50 per share in cash and increased its offer on March 29, 2012 to $51.00 per share in cash for an aggregate of approximately $6.7 billion on a fully diluted basis. The increased offer represents a substantial premium to Illumina's unaffected market prices: a premium of 88% over Illumina's closing stock price on December 21, 2011 – the day before market rumors about a potential transaction between Roche and Illumina drove Illumina's stock price significantly higher – and an 84% premium over the one-month historical average and a 64% premium over the three-month historical average of Illumina's share price, both as of December 21, 2011.

In addition to its cash tender offer, Roche has nominated a slate of highly qualified, independent candidates for election to Illumina's Board of Directors and proposed certain other matters for the consideration of Illumina's shareholders at Illumina's 2012 annual meeting, which if adopted, would result in Roche-nominated directors comprising a majority of the Illumina board.

About Roche

Various factors may cause actual results to differ materially in the future from those reflected in forward-looking statements contained in this presentation, among others:

- 1 pricing and product initiatives of competitors;
- 2 legislative and regulatory developments and economic conditions;
- 3 delay or inability in obtaining regulatory approvals or bringing products to market;
- 4 fluctuations in currency exchange rates and general financial market conditions;
- 5 uncertainties in the discovery, development or marketing of new products or new uses of existing products, including without limitation negative results of clinical trials or research projects, unexpected side-effects of pipeline or marketed products;
- 6 increased government pricing pressures;
- 7 interruptions in production;
- 8 loss of or inability to obtain adequate protection for intellectual property rights;
- 9 litigation;
- 10 loss of key executives or other employees; and

Situation Update

- o On April 2, Illumina released an investor presentation explaining why it believed Roche's offer to purchase all shares of the company for $51.00 per share was inadequate
- o However, Illumina did not offer any quantitative evidence why Roche's offer is not full and fair
  - Nor did Illumina provide any quantitative evidence why its shares are worth more than Roche's offer
  - Roche would welcome the opportunity to learn more about what in Illumina's outlook supports a higher valuation
- o On April 2, Illumina also announced estimated revenue for Q1 2012
  - Its preliminary estimate of $270 million was slightly (~5%) greater than analyst consensus for the quarter ($257 million per I/B/E/S consensus)
  - The preliminary estimate for Q1 implies annual revenue in line with the company's original guidance of $1.0-$1.075 billion in revenue for the full year 2012
    - Research analysts used this revenue guidance to formulate their price targets, which were at a median of $34.00 per share before Roche made its offer public
  - Again, Illumina did not publicize any changes to its outlook or business model that would substantiate additional value beyond levels offered by investors and research analysts prior to the transaction

Key Claims

Key Claims Made in Illumina Investor
Presentation

- o Roche's tender offer bid is "timed to take advantage of a temporary dislocation in Illumina's stock price"

Roche Response

- o Over two of the past three years, Illumina traded in line or below an index of its peers and the broader market, which suggests that the out-performance was the actual dislocation
- o This short period of out-performance was driven by unsustainable growth expectations. These expectations moderated during 2011, causing Illumina's share price to revert to its peers and the broader market
  - Prior to Roche's public offer, research analyst price targets were $34.00 per share
- o Illumina's own actions suggest a bearish view of the stock price
  - In Q4 2011, with its stock trading at extremely low levels, Illumina could have continued its stock buybacks or retired its outstanding warrants
  - To do so would have been an opportunistic and value-enhancing use of the $1.1 billion of cash on its balance sheet
  - However, Illumina did neither of these things, calling into question management's belief that the stock price dislocation was temporary
- o Quantitative metrics show that Roche's offer is highly attractive
  - Implied multiples of 21.6x LTM EBITDA and 6.5x LTM revenue are highly attractive relative to precedent life science tools transactions
  - Implied multiples of 34.2x 2012E earnings and 2.06x 2012E P/E/G are highly attractive relative to the trading levels of other life science tools companies
  - Illumina has never offered any quantitative evidence that Roche's offer is inadequate compared to its pre-transaction trading valuation or precedent life science tools transactions

Key Claims Made in Illumina Investor
Presentation

- o "Illumina has delivered consistent and superior growth"

Roche Response

- o Illumina's past performance has no bearing on its ability to deliver superior returns to shareholders in the future
o Over the past three years, Illumina's share price has in fact under-performed its peers by 24% and the broader index by 22%

Key Claims Made in Illumina Investor
Presentation

- o Illumina expects to "continue to deliver growth for the foreseeable future"
-----

Roche Response

- o Illumina management recently issued its lowest guidance ever for revenue and EPS growth
o Illumina has little experience in regulated areas such as diagnostics that require significant biological expertise as well as interactions with the FDA - issues dealing with these complicated market dynamics could hurt the company's future growth prospects
o Illumina has yet to provide any quantitative analysis regarding the potential value from new markets and growth opportunities
- Illumina has not outlined a strategy to address its so called "largest opportunity" in molecular diagnostics
- Illumina's pre-offer growth prospects already reflected the ample opportunities for future growth, and research analysts and investors were aware of them well before Roche's public offer
o Regardless, Roche's offer compensates Illumina shareholders for future growth, as it values Illumina at 2.06x 2012E P/E/G, which represents a 16% premium to the three-year high

Key Claims Made in Illumina Investor

Roche Response

- o "Global funding environment expected to improve"
o There is considerable uncertainty around the longer-term outlook for funding of genetic sequencing by the National Institutes of Health ("NIH") and other U.S. and foreign government organizations o The next two years of NIH funding are subject to automatic sequestration cuts due to the failure of the Joint Congressional Deficit Reduction "Super Committee" to reach an agreement
o The uncertain European outlook - including a combination of government austerity measures as well as a projected economic recession - will hamper Illumina's growth abroad

Roche's Offer to Acquire Illumina

Presentation to Investors

April 2012

HIPPE

1. We have a slide presentation which we will give to you and take you through briefly, but first I would like to give some background to put things in context.
  2. Because of our interest in Illumina's business, and its relationship to Roche's businesses, we have been trying to have a dialogue with Illumina's board and management since November 1, 2011 - which is when we first called them.
  3. Although conversations in our half-dozen calls have always been polite, their response has always been to delay and then to ask us to go away. It took six weeks to arrange a brief meeting in San Diego, and then the responses progressed from "we'll get back to you" to "we're in Christmas season and I can't get people together" to "please sign a two year standstill" to "we are not interested in discussing a sale" to "your price is too low to justify a discussion".
  4. It became clear to us that they were trying to delay past the time to nominate directors so they would not have to talk to us or face a shareholder vote on the issue

- and that we would then give up and go away.
  5. To induce a real discussion we made a public offer and nominated director candidates with superb credentials, and no connection to Roche, whose only commitment to us will be to listen and do whatever is best for Illumina shareholders. Based on public information, which is all that we have, our offer is very strong by every measurement.
  6. We strongly believe, and hope you will agree that our candidates are well qualified and independent and that our offer price --- especially at the current increased level - is more than sufficient to require the commencement of a dialogue.
  7. Turn discussion to substantive (slide) presentation and/or questions.

Executive Summary

Roche is increasing its all-cash offer to acquire Illumina to $51.00 per share.

- o Offer is highly attractive, representing both full and fair value as well as value certainty
- Implies 1-day and 1-month average premiums to the unaffected price of 88% and 84%, respectively and LTM revenue and EBITDA multiples of 6.5x and 21.6x, respectively, all of which are higher than all precedent life science tools transactions (1) (2)
- o Precedent life science tools transactions have median 1-day and 1-month average premiums to the unaffected stock price of 33% and 37%, respectively and LTM revenue and EBITDA multiples of 3.3x and 16.0x, respectively (3)
- Implies a valuation multiple of 34.2x 2012E net income, which is higher than all of the company's publicly traded peers (4) o Offer is being increased in response to dialogue with Illumina shareholders
- In light of continued refusal by Illumina to engage in constructive dialogue, Roche has increased its offer in an effort to conclude a negotiated transaction with Illumina
- Desire to engage in meaningful dialogue and conduct due diligence
- By not engaging with Roche, Illumina reinforces the notion that its Board is entrenched and not focused on shareholder value
- Absent ability to interact with Illumina, Roche has no choice but to continue to pursue a transaction unilaterally

Source: FactSet, Capital IQ, I/B/E/S consensus, Bloomberg.

- (1) Premiums based on unaffected closing share price of $27.17 on 12/21/2011, the day prior to market rumors about a potential acquisition of Illumina by Roche. 3
- (2) LTM as of 12/31/2011.
- (3) Includes selected announced, closed and effective transactions with targets in the biotechnology research equipment manufacturers and biological products and life sciences tools and services manufacturers sectors since 2006.
- (4) Includes Thermo Fisher, Becton, Dickinson, Agilent, Life Technologies, Sigma-Aldrich, Waters, Mettler-Toledo, Qiagen, PerkinElmer, Bio-Rad Laboratories, Bruker and Techne.

Executive Summary (Cont'd)

Roche is increasing its all-cash offer to acquire Illumina to $51.00 per share.

- o _____ Illumina has continually emphasized significant growth opportunities for sequencing in clinical settings as well as industrial end markets - However, no detail has been provided as to how Illumina will be able to exploit such opportunities
- No other evidence or quantitative support has been provided to reassure shareholders of when or how this growth will be realized
- o In fact, since Roche's private offer, the only company news has surrounded an increasing competitive landscape with product-related announcements from Oxford Nanopore and Life Technologies
- o _____ Additionally, company guidance for 2012 is in line with where research analyst expectations were in December 2011, at which time the median price target was $32.00 per share - Prior to the offer being made public, Illumina median price targets were at $34.00 per share, 33% below Roche's offer
- o Illumina's pre-offer P/E/G of 1.51x was in line with its 1, 2 and 3 year averages and P/E/G of peers (1)
- 2.06x implied P/E/G of Roche's offer is 16% above any P/E/G Illumina has traded at for the past three years

Illumina's Business Faces Significant Challenges

- o All-cash offer transfers 100% of risk from Illumina's shareholders to Roche
  - o Maturing market and unsettled global economic conditions imply reduced growth prospects
  - o Uncertainty around longer-term outlook for genetic funding by NIH and other U.S. and foreign government organizations
  - Illumina's sales are vulnerable due to its highly concentrated sales exposure to government and academic spending
  - o Increasingly competitive landscape
  - Recent Life Technologies and Oxford Nanopore announcements around new product introduction / enhanced product capabilities
  - o Advances in technology
  - Single molecule / nanopore technologies currently being developed
  - o Speculative nature around Illumina's announced single molecule chemistry
  - Multiple competitors in R[AND]D
  - o Illumina has little experience in regulated areas such as diagnostics that require significant biological expertise as well as interactions with the FDA
  - o Illumina meaningfully complements Roche's strategy around enabling personalized healthcare
  - Roche is willing to take a longer term view in light of strategic importance
  - Utilize Roche's comprehensive diagnostic expertise and global reach to accelerate transition of sequencing to routine clinical use - Roche provides capabilities and reach that Illumina does not possess in-house

However, Roche is Best Positioned to Overcome these Identified Challenges

Roche's global reach and expertise in diagnostics will allow Roche to reinvigorate Illumina's growth in ways unattainable as a standalone company.

- o _____ Roche is better positioned to make the type of investments that are required for long term success - Roche is uniquely positioned to expand Illumina's end markets from both a geographic and customer mix perspective - Rapidly evolving technologies may put additional risk to Illumina's business over the next several years - Funding environment may remain challenging for an extended period of time
  - Roche intends to invest in growth, key employees and technologies
  - o Illumina is a strong fit with Roche's diagnostics and Applied Science business and complements Roche's portfolio in sequencing and microarrays and strengthens offering in genomics research and diagnostics
  - The combined capabilities will strengthen Roche's position in sequencing and microarrays to address the growing demand for genetic / genomic solutions - An acquisition of Illumina will strengthen Roche's position in the life science and diagnostics market - Roche's extensive diagnostics experience and global presence could help accelerate the _____ 9 transition of DNA sequencing into clinical and routine diagnostics
