Carefully

consider

shareholder

dilution

rate

when granting equity compensation

Given the company's higher use of equity based compensation relative to other companies, the dilution and burn rate is generally slightly higher on a relative basis. The Committee believes this use of equity more closely links executive and shareholder interests

Aligning Pay with Performance During Our Senior Leadership Transition

Phebe Novakovic became CEO in 2013 and began building her management team; SVP and CFO

L. Hugh Redd retired on Dec. 31, 2013 as part of this transition

Mr. Redd served through all of 2013 but was not employed by the company in March 2014, which is when 2013 long-term incentive awards were granted in recognition of 2013 and prior years

performance

Executives

are not entitled to such grants

To compensate Mr. Redd for agreeing to retire on Dec. 31, precluding his receipt of an equity grant in 2014, the company agreed to provide a pension service credit

The $2 million incremental value of the service credit approximately correlates to the estimated amount of the grant date value of the equity compensation that Mr. Redd would have been entitled to had he remained with the company, given his bonus and salary

The Compensation Committee believes this form of compensation links Mr. Redd's pay with performance, while recognizing his willingness to support the leadership transition

The company has not provided service credits to any other current executive officers. In light of concerns raised about the use of pension service credits, the company will not provide service credits to any named executive officers going forward
