The following is an excerpt from the transcript of an internal video blog for Taylor Morrison Home Corporation (Taylor Morrison) employees featuring Sheryl Palmer, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of Taylor Morrison, and Roger Cregg, President and Chief Executive Officer of AV Homes, Inc. (AV Homes), recorded on June 11, 2018 and made available to Taylor Morrison employees on June 21, 2018:

Sheryl Palmer: Here we are on Monday morning, June 11th. Just days after our announcement of our exciting news about our acquisition of AV Homes, and we wanted to share all the great stuff that's about to happen, and I have a special guest with us this morning, Roger Cregg, the CEO of AV Homes

I don't think it's a surprise to anyone by now we've made a recent announcement to acquire AV Homes. I hope you guys are as excited as I am. If I would look at what this would mean in 2018, we would be well over 11,000 closings. We would be over $5,000,000,000 in 2018 if these two companies were together. So you can imagine what that means for 2019. Well, I have a special guest today, let me introduce to you Roger Cregg, the CEO of AV Homes, to share a little about their organization and their team members.

Sheryl: You know, Roger, it'd be great to hear. What are you hearing since the announcement? What's on the minds of your team members? What do you think they need to know? What do they want to know?

Roger Cregg: Once we move through our process and understanding the organization and how the organizations fit together, I think we'll get a better balance of the organization focused on what's the right thing to do going forward with the combination of the companies.

Sheryl: I'm excited for you and I to get on the road and get to talk to all the team members in person. This is a great first step, right? But this is all about the people, and so I hear you. There's People start to fill in the blanks all on their own and we need to help them, you know, and fill them in. But when I think about, you know, some of the discussions I've had with the street since the announcement, one of the areas I've shared I have the greatest confidence in is our ability to talk and communicate with the people the right way. I like to say we're a people-first organization. At the end of the day, it's great to have great communities, great land, great product, but none of it matters if we don't have the right people directing it all. So, I'm so excited to get out into the field and meet the team members. Yeah, there's going to be some changes, but we want to make sure everybody understands what those are and the opportunities, I think, are even more tremendous than the changes ahead.

Roger: We've asked our people really to stay focused on the business, business as usual until we actually define exactly what change comes. But more working with trades, working with customers, extremely important that we continue to stay focused on what we do.

Sheryl: Yeah, it's a great message. We've sent the same one internally, because, in these markets that we both have a business, it's hard not to get distracted, so we're going to do our best, I'm sure both of us, to help our team members understand what next steps are, but we got a big year to deliver. I think we both have a big year, actually we have a big quarter to deliver first, then we'll worry about the big year.

You know, Roger, another area I'm really excited about is we both seem to serve the same consumer segments, but we do serve them a little differently. So, this is one—this is an opportunity where one plus one, I think, is going to equal more than two. I look at that first-time buyer and, you know, 80 million of them out there. And we tend to serve that two income, higher-end first-time buyer. Gosh, in the Bay Area, our first-time buyer average sales price is in the 700,000s. Where you are serving that buyer as well, but you also serve so much more robustly than we do, that more affordable first-time buyer in many of your markets. Then, I look at the active adult which I think the two of our companies probably serve that buyer as well as anyone. But, once again, we seem to serve it a bit different. Our model in Florida tends to be much more around that country club, very high-end adult living, not exclusively, but certainly that's a high percentage. Where, when I look at Sola Vida and some of your holdings in the West, they tend to be a more affordable first, not first-time active adult, but a more affordable active adult. So, we put those together and what a complement. I mean, I think we will serve these buyer groups unlike any other builder out there.

Roger: And just like the active adult, of course we see today 55+ can mean anything—where you're targeting or age-restricted, I think there's a wide-open field out there for a lot of different models to run in the active adult area.

Sheryl: Yeah. I'm really hopeful that between the two businesses we'll have product that we can use between all of those holdings. I think there's a lot to learn from each other here.

Since we've made the announcement, I have gotten so many emails from our team members that say how excited they are about this. And, to me, that kind of says culture. There, I'm sure like we've said, there's going to be some folks that are wondering what's next and how does this all come together. And we've got some time ahead. I expect when we get through all the steps with shareholder votes and through the SEC, we should see these two companies join sometime late Q3/early Q4, but I already see our team members kind of opening their arms and saying how can we help, how do we get to meet everybody. It's a pretty exciting time.

Well, I hope that was helpful. I am super excited, I've probably said that a couple times before, but this is a really big time for Taylor Morrison, we are on our journey to stuff that's really, really big, and this is a great first step. I sure appreciate you guys taking the time to listen out. I know every moment out there is valuable. We're marching to the finish of a really important Q2. You can imagine, and we just made this kind of announcement to the marketplace. How important it is that we don't lose sight of what we're doing, and I know based on the numbers we have two really big weeks ahead of us. So, thanks in advance, you guys, for keeping focused, staying with it, and making sure all of our customers have a tremendous closing experience.

You know, normally I have a customer segment in every Shoes off with Sheryl, today I've decided to do something a little different. I'm the customer, I have to have some shout-outs here because let me start with Lou Stephens, the President of M&A. It's hard to even describe the amount of work that goes into a transaction like this, but Lou has really carried some very, very heavy balls for the organization this past many weeks as we've been negotiating our way through this deal. I'm going to probably take a big risk here and try to list a number of the teams and departments, but in all of our overlapping markets, hats off to you guys as you got out into the marketplace and saw every community that AV Homes has. So, our land teams, our construction teams, our finance teams out in the field, to the corporate team that's done so much work. It doesn't matter if I'm talking about sales and marketing, if I'm talking about people services, and significant heavy lifting in our finance teams, and at the top of the heap our legal team.

Our communications team has helped us get to today, the back office has carried the ball while everybody else is busy doing other stuff. But, to all of you, this would not have been possible without all our team members across the organization. So, thank you, from the very bottom of my heart.
